PROFITABLE CROP IN WEST DESPITE RAINS AND SNOW

That optimism is again prevalent with respect to the crop, and that the crop in the main will be a profitable one were the key notes of the report issued Monday morning by the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnipeg. The weather during most of the past week was favorable, and much threshing was done. On Friday, and again on Monday rain fell in parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. This means a suspension of threshing operations for at least two days. Threshing is, however, general. With the exception of districts which received favorable predictions, indications are that in some of the best of grades from the country farmers will suffer, satisfactory prices and good yields will restore confidence. Yields in many localities are reported as abundant.

Warm weather and wind in Manitoba created excellent drying conditions enabling many threshing outfits to resume work. Yields in Manitoba have been fully up to expectation and from 45 to 50 per cent of the threshing of both wheat and coarse grain is completed. Grades have suffered reduction due to bleaching and sprouting. The latter condition while affecting some areas from 25 to 30 per cent is not serious when the whole crop is taken into consideration. Well filled crops are the rule in Manitoba this year and will more than offset financial loss caused by lower grades.

Rain fell on portions of central and northwestern Saskatchewan, and further showers and snow were reported Monday from Secretan to Swift Current. Threshing continues in the other districts of Saskatchewan. In the central and southern districts from 80 to 95 per cent of the grain is threshed, and from 50 to 55 per cent in the north. Yields are turning out well and grades are generally better than expected. Fall plowing is delayed, and only 5 per cent completed. The farmers will easily catch up with this phase of their work provided severe frosts hold off as long as usual. Labor conditions are acute in some districts.

In Alberta cutting and threshing continued until Friday when rain halted operations. Threshing will be resumed in all parts of Alberta today with the exception of the Suffield and Brooks subdivisions. Cutting is completed with the exception of the Crownsmont and Red Deer subdivisions where from 10 to 25 per cent of the grain remains standing. Threshing is about 50 per cent complete. Reports of wheat growing in stocks are exaggerated and out-turns are expected to show less damage than rumors indicate. Sugar beets are being harvested and are showing a greater tonnage than last year. Livestock is active and quite a number of cattle have been shipped.

On the E.D. & B.C. railway weather conditions have been showery, but the whole sufficiently favorable to permit carrying on with threatening interruptions. The crop is exceptional in this district and most of the grain going into the elevators is grading No. 1.

In British Columbia the apple crop in the Okanagan is being harvested under more favorable conditions. The movement of fruit through the piers has been slow owing to weather conditions there. Packing houses are filled to capacity. The onion crop is damaged from 30 to 50 per cent by frost. This does not mean that all this quantity will not be shipped but that there will be a very few standard grade onions fit to sell from this territory. Frost completely wiped out the balance of the tomato crop but the fruit trees were not hurt.

ENTRANCE CLASS AT UNIVERSITY IS LARGEST SO FAR

Edmonton, Oct. 9.—Following the initiation of nearly 300 freshmen students who will make the largest entrance class the institution has yet had, the opening week of the 1922-23 session at the University of Alberta came to a close Friday night with an enormous snake dance down the main streets of Edmonton and a theatre party.

Officials of the university state that the registration this year is much larger than it has been in previous years. Although no definite figures are obtainable, approximately 1,450 are at present attending lectures. This is 150 in excess of last year. The residences are filled to capacity for the first time in the history of the university.

The host of friends of Mrs. C. L. Vaughn regret to learn that she is quite poorly. Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn have now taken up their temporary residence with their daughter, Mr. H. J. Montgomery, until Mrs. Vaughn has recovered from her illness.

Mrs. James A. Wagon, 1040 Maple St., London, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my nerves for the past five years, and was so bad I would have to call my husband home from his work on many occasions. I took all kinds of doctors' medicines, but without any effect.

The last spell I had was about six months ago when I felt like a nervous wreck, could not sleep, and would sit and cry over nothing.

One day I was terribly bad, shivering and screaming, and my next door neighbor came in to see what was the matter with me, and not being able to tell her she sent for my husband. He brought me home a box of

The Greatest Mystery Story Ever Written

BEAU GESTE

By PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER WREN

George Lawrence meets an old friend, Major Henri de Beauvals and the latter tells him a strange story. He had gone to rescue the lonely fort of Zindernut and finds all the men within it dead—but propped in the embrasures. Inside he finds a commandant killed and in his hand a note, signed by Michael Geste, admitting the theft of the Blue Water, a valuable sapphire, owned by Lady Brandon, who is Beau Geste's aunt. Later that night, the body of the officer disappears and the fort is set on fire. Lawrence, who knows Lady Brandon well, immediately goes to her estate in England to find out what this mystery is. It is about to meet her. Now go on with the story.

Some pictures of horse and hound, some antlers and fox masks and brushes; some trophies he had sent from Nigeria, specially good heads of lion, buffalo, gnu, and gazelle. From these his eye travelled to the great fireplace, on each side of which stood a mounted Lake Tchad elephant's foot, doing menial service, while above its stone mantel, a fine trophy of African weapons gleamed. One of his greatest satisfactions had always been to acquire something worthy to be sent to Brandon Abbas, to give her pleasure and to keep him in mind.

And now, perhaps, was his real chance of giving her pleasure and keeping himself, for a space, very much in her mind. He pulled the quaint old handle of a chain, and a distant bell clanged.

A footman approached, a stranger. He would enquire as to whether the butler was at home. But as he turned to go, the butler appeared in the doorway from the inner hall.

"Hallo, Brandon! How are you?" inquired Lawrence.

"Why, Mr. George, sir!" replied the old man, who had known Lawrence for thirty years, coming forward and looking unwontedly human.

"This is a real pleasure, sir."

It was a real five pound note too, when the visitor, a perfect gent, departed. Quite a source of income Mr.

Lawrence had been, ever since Henry Brandon had been under foot. In the service of her ladyship's father.

"Her ladyship is at the house, sir, if you'd like to come straight out," he continued, knowing that the visitor was a very old friend indeed, and always welcome. "I will announce you."

Burton led the way.

"How is Lady Brandon?" inquired Lawrence.

"She enjoys very good health, sir, considering."

"Considering what?"

"Everything, sir," was the non-committal reply.

The visitor smiled to himself. A good servant, this.

"Queer, sir, very. And gets queer, poor gentleman," was the answer.

Lawrence expressed regret at this bad news concerning the chaplain, as the Reverend Maurice Ffolliott was always called in that house.

"Is Mr. Michael here?" he asked.

"No, sir, he ain't. Nor none of the other young gentlemen," was the reply.

"Was there anything unusual in the old man's tone?"

Emerging from the shrubbery, crossing a rose garden, some lawn tennis courts, and a daisy-pied stretch of cedar-studded road, the pair entered

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

That advertising columns will tell you where you can find splendid values for your money?

That it is a mistake to think that all stores have the same price on standard goods?

That when they have special values you can always find them mentioned in the ads—Read the Ads.

That you should trade with the merchant who advertises?

That you will be welcome and the clerks will greet you with a smile?

That they will be courteous to you? That they will thank you in a way that will show that they appreciate your business?

That the live business man realizes that prompt, courteous and careful attention to every customer establishes a favorable reputation for his place of business.

Trading with the Store of Advertisers is a pleasure.

A wood, followed a path beneath enormous elms and beeches, and came out to a sward of velvet turf.

On two sides, the left and rear, rose the great old trees of a thickly forested hill; on the right, the grey old house, and from the front of this open space the hillside fell away to the famous view.

By wicker table and hammock stand a lady reclined in a chaise longue. She was reading a book and her back was towards Lawrence, whose heart missed a beat and hastened to make up for the omission by a redoubled speed.

The butter copped at the right distance and upon the right note, and as Lady Brandon turned, announced the visitor, hovered, placed a wicker chair, and faded from the scene.

"George!" said Lady Brandon, in her soft deep contralto, with a pleased brightening of her wide grey eyes and flash of beautiful teeth. But she did not flush nor pale and there was no quickening of her breathing. It was upon the man that these symptoms were produced by the meeting, although it was a meeting anticipated by him, unexpected by her.

"Patricia!" he said, and extended both hands. She took them frankly and Lawrence took that both with a curiously gentle and reverent manner, an exhibition of a George Lawrence unknown to many people.

"Well, my dear!" he said, and looked long at the unveiled, if mature, determined, clever face before him—that of a woman forty years, of strong character, and of aristocratic breeding.

"Yes, what?" George asked Lady Brandon.

"Yes, you are positively as young and as beautiful as ever," he replied—but with no air of gallantry and compliment, and rather as a sober statement of ascertained fact.

"And you are foolish, George. Sit down and tell me why you have disobeyed and come here before your wedding. Or—were you married, George?" was the smiling reply.

"No, Patricia, I am not married," said Lawrence, relinquishing her hands slowly.

"And I have disobeyed you, and come here without bringing a wife, because I hoped you might be in need of my help. I mean, I feared you might be in trouble, and in need of help, and hoped that I might be able to give it."

Lady Brandon fixed a penetrating gaze on Lawrence's face—neither startled nor alarmed, he felt, but keenly and steadily to be described as wary, or at least watchful.

"Trouble?" In need of help, George? How? she asked, and whatever of wariness or watchfulness had peeped from her eyes retired, and her face became a beautiful mask, showing no more than reposeful and faintly-amused interest.

"Well—it is a longish story," said Lawrence. "But I need not inflame it on you if you'll tell me if Beau Geste is all right and—the 'Blue Water'—er—safe and sound and—er—all that you know."

"What?" ejaculated his hearer sharply.

"There was no possible doubt now, as to the significance of the look on Lady Brandon's face. It certainly could be called one of alarm, and her direct gaze was distinctly watchful and wary. Had not she also noted very slightly? Undoubtedly she frowned faintly as she asked:

"What are you talking about, George?"

"Beau Geste and the 'Blue Water'!" replied Lawrence. "If I appear to be talking through my hat, I am not really, and will produce reason for my wild but wicked words," he laughed. "There is method in my madness, dear."

"There's madness in your method," replied Lady Brandon, a trifle trilled, and added: "Have you seen Michael then? Or what? Tell me!"

"No, I have not seen him—but—"

"Then what are you talking about? What do you know?" she interrupted, speaking hurriedly, a very sure sign that she was greatly perturbed.

"I don't know anything, Patricia. I'm asking you, because I have, most extraordinarily, come into possession of a document that purports to be a confession by Beau Geste that he stole the 'Blue Water'," began Lawrence.

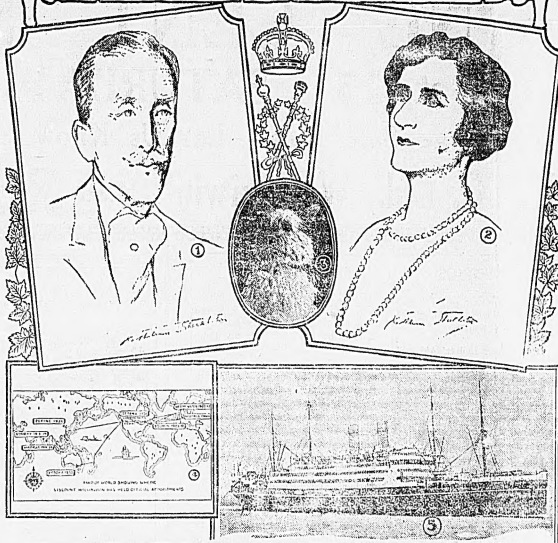

"Then it was—" whispered Lady Brandon.

"Was what, Patricia?" asked Lawrence.

"Go on, dear," she replied hastily.

"How and where did you get this confession? Tell me quickly."

CANADA'S NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL ARRIVES

1.—Crayon sketch of Viscount Willingdon drawn on board Empress of Scotland just prior to the vessel called for Canada.
2.—Viscount Willingdon, dressed in the Canadian Pacific line uniform of Scotland just prior to the vessel's departure for Canada.
3.—Lady Brandon, welcomed to their Excellencies which ensued instant popularity.
4.—Jewell carried for use on Empress of Scotland when she carried the Governor-General to Canada, showing in a map of the various positions he will occupy in the Dominion of Canada.
5.—Canadian Pacific Flagship Empress of Scotland which carried their Excellencies to Canada.

Their Excellencies Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon made many friends on their voyage from England to Quebec on board the Canadian Pacific Flagship Empress of Scotland, when His Lordship came here in October to become Governor-General of the Dominion. They paid visits to all parts of the vessel chatting with new settlers for Canada and presiding at the various functions that take place aboard ship during an ocean voyage. Sharing their popularity was their Cairn Terrier, Misty, who was friends with everyone except perhaps a plump Chow who looked to him as though he might develop into a dangerous rival.

Canada's thirteenth Governor-General had a fine reception when the ship docked at Quebec. He struck a tactful note when he told his French-Canadian audience he too could claim descent from the Normans and that French blood flowed in his veins equally as in theirs. "In this country," he said, "the descendants of our two races have worked for many years under the British Crown for a common purpose and object, namely, to promote the welfare and prosperity of the people of this wonderful country."

First impressions are vital in establishing successful relations and perhaps no impression gave so cordial an effect as one of His Lordship's speeches introduced the Empress of Scotland, which was broadcast all over Canada. In it he said: "I wonder if I may venture to add one word of rather an intimate and personal character. It is this—in wishing all my fellow-passengers the best of good luck in the future and all health and happiness they can possibly expect and obtain, may I ask them one and all to give an occasional thought—a kindly thought—to one who is about to undertake very great responsibilities for the British Empire in the great Dominion of Canada."

That is the true democratic note, sounded with modesty and feeling and sure of an unreserved response throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

"As I said, it's a long story," replied Lawrence. "It was found by de Beaujolais at a place called Zinderneuf in the French Sudan, in the hand of a dead man."

"Not Michael?" interrupted Lady Brandon.

"No—a Frenchman. An adjutant in charge of a fort that had been attacked by Arabs."

"Our Henri de Beaujolais?" interrupted Lady Brandon, again. "Who was at school with you? Rose Cary's son?"

"Yes. He found it in this dead officer's hand—" replied Lawrence. "Er—has the sapphire been stolen, Patricia, and—er—excuse the silly question—is this Beau's writing?" and he thrust his hand into the inner pocket of his jacket.

"But of course it isn't," he continued, as he produced an envelope and extracted a stained and dirty piece of paper.

Lady Brandon took the letter and looked at it, he face hard, enigmatical, a puzzled frown marring the smoothness of her forehead, her firm shapely mouth more tightly compressed than usual.

She read the document and then looked out into the distance, down thecombe, and across the green and smiling plain, as though communing with herself and deciding how to answer.

"Tell me the whole story from beginning to end," she said at length. "If it takes you the week-end, but tell me this quickly. Do you know anything more than you have told me about either Michael or the 'Blue Water'?"

"I know nothing whatever, my dear but what I have told you. You know as much as I do now—except the details, of course."

George Lawrence noted that Lady Brandon had neither admitted nor denied that the sapphire had been stolen, had neither admitted nor denied that the handwriting was that of her nephew.

Obviously and undoubtedly there was something wrong, something queer, and in connection with Beau Geste too. For one thing, he was missing and she did not know where he was.

But since all questions as to him, his handwriting, and the safety of the "Help me, George. I have no one but you, and you are a tower of strength. I am in great trouble."

"You aren't looking too well, George my dear," she said, as they entered the wood.

"Lots of fever, lately," he replied, and added: "I feel as fit as six men now," and pressed the hand that he had seized.

"Give it up and come home, George," said Lady Brandon, and he turned quickly toward her, his eyes opening widely. "And let me find you a wife," she continued.

Lawrence sighed and ignored the suggestion.

"How is Willott?" he asked instead.

"Perfectly well, thank you. Why shouldn't he be?" was the reply—in the tone of which a careful listener, such as George Lawrence, might have detected a note of defensiveness, almost of annoyance, or repudiation of an unwarranted implication.

If Lawrence did detect it, he ignored it also.

"Where is the good Sir Hector Brandon?" he asked, with casual politeness.

"Oh, in Thibet, or Paris, or East Africa, or Monte Carlo, or the South Sea Islands, or Homburg. Actually Kashmir, I believe, thank you, George," (Continued on Page 6)

BIRDS ARE VALUABLE

The 100,000,000 birds that annually fly over the United States are valued at about $300,000,000 theoretically, at least, to the farmers of that country. They protect the trees and crops from insects that do damage. The eight most populous varieties of the birds are robins, English sparrows, song sparrows, cat birds, chipping sparrows, house wrens, king birds and blue birds. Oats because mice are their prey, are counted as very valuable to farmers.

TAKING ADVICE

"With my herd of Leghorn chickens, I believed my trouble's done; I'd be happy as the chickens selling hen fruit by the ton. All my hens were good and healthy, their environment sublime, and they ought to make me wealthy as old Croesus in a time. But James Casper came pirating to my hen farm on a day, and he did some scornful hooting as he watched my pullets gay. "Greenhorns always make this blunder," said he, viewing coops and pens, "and I often often wonder, why they fall for Leghorn hens. Leghorn hens are good at laying, they have eggs upon their minds, but you seldom find them weighing half as much as other kinds. Now, Buff Cochins lay with ardor, of their energy I boast, and when you would stock your larder, one grown hen will feed a host." This James Casper has been raising hens since Hector was a pup; from experience amazing, wisdom he was coughing up. So my Leghorns then I traded for Buff Cochins large and tall, and I smiled when they paraded by the slatted henhouse wall. "Hens like these," I said, "are winners, they'll lay many eggs, I woe, and when I laid they'll furnish dinners fit for any king or queen." But old Gumback, living near me, came along to view my flocks and he started in to queer me saying, "Get you Plymouth Rocks. The Buff Cochins have no standing, they are punk and obsolete, and more feed they are demanding than draft horses need to eat. Plymouth Rocks are truly regal, get the white ones or the barred; don't let any one mislead other poultry to your yard." So I kept on changing; trading, as I listened to advice, and I saw my bank roll falling down to nothing in a trice. Now my neighbors have the chickens. I have counsel in a stack, and the darkness round me thickens, and there's gooseflesh on my back — Wait Mosen.

CREOSOTING OF TIMBER PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

Treatment by creosote of timber used in the construction of bridges by the Alberta government has proved an unqualified success and is undoubtedly the outstanding feature of bridge work throughout the province, declared Hon. Alex Ross, minister of public works.

"Heretofore wooden bridges were considered good for replacement every 10 or 12 years, and in many cases more frequently, but by treating the timber with creosote we have found that though the initial cost is one-third greater the life of the bridge is three times that built with untreated timber. This insures economy in the long run and is a step in the right direction of conserving the natural resources."

Hon. Mr. Ross stated that during the present season the government had expended $500,000 on bridges that had given continual employment to 15 bridge crews totalling 125 men. Two crews worked on steel and concrete and the balance on timber bridges.

In all 468 bridges have been built this year, one concrete, 21 steel and 436 wooden. All steel spans, except those in the northern part of the province, where native timber was available, were constructed on creosoted timber abutments or on concrete. All piling and timber for timber bridges were treated except those in the north where local material was used.

The total amount of timber used was 2,121,827 feet. Of this, 10,000 linear feet was untreated piling and 60,000 feet of native pine piling was treated as was 200,000 feet of fir and tamarack piling. Of the other lumber $500,000 feet was untreated and 1,711,827 treated.

Locally all bridge work for the season has been completed, said Hon. Mr. Ross though steel bridge construction is carried on at the year round.

Most of the timber used is cut in Alberta west of Red Deer where large supplies of Jack pine are available. It is then shipped to Calgary where it is treated and made up according to specifications.

ERADICATE DIPHTHERIA

Diphtheria is essentially a children's disease, picking its victims chiefly during childhood and is a less extent in early adult life. It is always a serious disease, and not uncommonly a fatal one. It frequently kills, maims or cripples its victims, chiefly children. It is most insidious. There is no alarming rash, such as is seen in smallpox or scarlet fever to indicate the malignancy of the disease. There is ordinarily no prostration at the beginning, such as is seen in pneumonia to indicate the seriousness of the infection.

A small greyish white patch on the child's throat is usually the first sign of the disease, and at this stage the child does not appear to be very sick. In some instances the first indication of illness is an obstruction of breathing caused by the growth of a diphtheria membrane in the child's breathing passages. At this time the choking, gasping efforts to breathe terrify the child and the parents, but fortunately the stage favorable to treatment has passed.

When diphtheria and toxin was put into use in 1895 many health authorities then felt that a relatively easy conquest of the disease would result. In that, they were mistaken. Diphtheria antitoxin is effective as a cure only if given early. The disappointing feature about antitoxin has been its limited usefulness when given to prevent diphtheria. It only protects against the disease for two or three weeks. The immunizing substance is not long held in the body, and the patient becomes just as susceptible to the disease as before. Diphtheria, itself, does not render the person having it immune from a second or even a third attack.

Apparently, a more successful way for dealing with the situation becomes available. Toxin-antitoxin, the preventive measure against diphtheria, was first discovered accidentally in the course of experimentation about thirty years ago. In 1913, Park and Zingher of New York, began the immunization of children in a large organized way through the injection of toxin-antitoxin, and its use in many localities has since conclusively demonstrated the effectiveness and harmlessness of this measure. The favorable results have been almost universal from the beginning country and abroad.

Later a modification of this came into general use, the substance used being called "Toxoid" which is the same as Toxin-antitoxin except that the method employed in neutralizing the Toxin is somewhat different.

It has several advantages over the Toxin Antitoxin which need not be given here. The administration of Toxoid is a simple procedure and can safely be performed by any physician. Two hypodermic injections of the substance are given in the arm of the subject at intervals of one month between each injection. It is but remotely related to antitoxin. Toxin-antitoxin or Toxoid will not cure diphtheria. It will prevent it, but the immunity may be some weeks in developing. Once established, the immunity will last for years, and probably for life.

Every infant between six months and twelve months of age is in the most favorable period to receive immunity against diphtheria through toxoid. In the first place the child at this age responds most readily to the treatment, and in the second place it is entering upon that period when it is most susceptible to diphtheria, and a time also when fatalities from the disease most frequently occur.

At this age diphtheria often appears in the form known as laryngeal diphtheria or membranous croup. In this type of disease the air passages are blocked almost from the beginning, and the child runs the added risk of strangulation, or must be subjected to either the operation of opening the windpipe, called tracheotomy, or inserting a tube into the throat by way of the mouth, called intubation. These risks add to the number of deaths.

The utilization of toxin-antitoxin and toxoid for diphtheria immunization work was considerably enhanced by the discovery of the test for susceptibility to diphtheria in 1913 by Dr. Bela Schick of Vienna, now of New York.

The Schick Test made it possible to test on a "yes-no" scale the immunities of power of an individual and at the same time to test the duration of immunity.

KEEN INTEREST IN ALBERTA EXHIBIT

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—"There" is no question that the mid-western states is one of the richest fields for settlers for western Canada," stated C. C. Groff, publicity director for the province of Alberta, who is in Winnipeg on a return from a five weeks' visit to exhibitions south of the line.

On behalf of the Alberta government Mr. Groff has been conducting an exhibit at the interstate fair at Sioux City, Iowa, taking in the states of Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota, and at Spencer, Iowa.

"The latter place," said Mr. Groff, "was one of the best points at which we ever exhibited, and furnished one of the richest fields for immigration prospects. The land values have come so high in the mid-western states that it is impossible for the young man to get a start with much less than $10,000 while our cheap lands and low taxes are an irresistible attraction to them. Thousands of people viewed our exhibit at the fairs mentioned, and there was the keenest demand for information concerning locations and conditions in the west. There appears to be a greater readiness than ever on the part of farmers in this territory to come to western Canada and when these farmers can view for themselves the products of our country and have their doubts removed, they are all the more eager to come. There is still a great deal of misunderstanding about Canada, as to its climate and possibilities, and the showing of such displays goes a long way toward educating the prospective settlers."

UNITED VETERANS TO DEFER CONVENTION

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The rapid expansion of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, is given as the principal reason for deferring the first national convention of the united veterans' organization in a statement issued from Dominion headquarters here Monday. Last November, at Winnipeg, it was tentatively understood that the first convention will take place a year hence, but the national executive has decided that owing to extensive organization work now under way in every province, the convention should be postponed for two months. It is announced that January 24, 1927, has been fixed as the opening date, and Winnipeg as the location. The statement is authorized by General Sir Percy Lake, of Victoria, national president of the Legion.

JOINED FORCES THREE WESTERN POULTRY POOLS

Calgary, Oct. 7.—The three provincial egg and poultry pools which up to the present have operated as separate units will in future act together as an inter-provincial body for the cooperative sale of these products, according to a decision reached at a meeting of delegates from the three organizations held here. The personnel of the inter-provincial board will consist of W. A. Landreth, Manitoba, chairman; Mrs. Bertha Holmes, Saskatchewan, vice chairman; Mrs. P. E. Wynman, Alberta, secretary, and G. Gordon, Manitoba; Mrs. E. E. Bowen, Saskatchewan, and H. C. McDaniel, Alberta, directors.

It is planned that this organization will carry on in a manner similar to that of the inter-provincial wheat pool and the union of the three separate provincial bodies under one head is considered a big step forward in cooperative marketing of farm products in the west. Very successful reports on the management of the Manitoba pool were submitted by the delegates from that province, where some 95 per cent of the egg and poultry production of the province is controlled by the cooperative selling agency.

It is understood that the Alberta provincial pool, which has since its inception been operated in connection with the provincial egg and poultry marketing service, will take over the latter organization as soon as the volume of business handled warrants this move. The chief function of the newly-formed inter-provincial pool will be the marketing of the poultry products from western Canada at the greatest benefit to the producer, and the importation of feed and other supplies on a wholesale scale. Local provincial markets will be handled as usual, by the pool of the province concerned.

AUTO HIGHWAY THROUGH CROW'S NEST PROBABLY

Edmonton, October 11.—Proposals made to Patrick Philip, deputy minister of public works for British Columbia, by Highway Commissioner C. A. Davidson, during the recent Good Roads convention in Edmonton, will probably result in the early construction of the motor highway to British Columbia through the Crow's Nest Pass.

The Alberta end of the road from the foothills westward to the boundary already has been completed, but the last three miles of the highway proposed by Alberta does not follow the old tortuous route, and unlike the old route, is wide and smooth. For this reason the British Columbia authorities are being asked to connect up with the new location, and to continue the road from the boundary in a new direction paralleling to the old road and meeting that route about a mile west of the boundary.

The plan outlined would eliminate many of the curves and bad features of the existing road, and Highway Commissioner Davidson stated that if an agreement was reached on the matter with the British Columbia authorities, work could be done on the last three miles on the Alberta side this winter, as it involved a lot of solid rock excavation which could be handled in the winter.

If carried out as outlined the new road will provide British Columbia with a splendid southern outlet to the prairies in place of the present twisting and turning road, and will also provide a good route for private cars into British Columbia.

Horrified Old Lady, in bird store—
"What a wicked talking parrot. He must have been kept on board a ship-dealer. 'No, no, no, in a garage'."

BEAU GESTE

replied Lady Brandon, and added: "Have you brought a suit-case or must you fire?"

"I am staying at the Brandon Arms, and have one there," admitted Lawrence.

"And how long have you been at the Brandon Arms, George?" she enquired.

"Five minutes," he answered.

"You must be tired of it, then, dear," commented Lady Brandon, and added: "I send Robert down for your things."

That evening, George Lawrence told Lady Brandon all that Major de Beaujolais had told him, adding his own ideas, suggestions, and theories. But whereas the soldier had been concerned with inexplicable events of the day, Lawrence was concerned with the inexplicable paper and the means by which it had reached the hand of a dead man on the roof of a desert outpost in the Sahara.

Throughout his telling of the tale, Lady Brandon maintained an unbroken silence, but her eyes scarcely left his face.

At the end she asked a few questions, but offered no opinion, propounded no theory.

"You'll talk about it after dinner, George," she said.

And after a pleasantly delightful dinner, a deuce-à-dix being explained that the Reverend Maurice Ffolliott was dining in his own room tonight, owing to a headache—George Lawrence found that the talking was again to be done by him. All that Lady Brandon contributed to the conversation was questions. Again she offered no opinion, propounded no theory.

Nor, as Lawrence reluctantly admitted to himself, when he lay awake in bed that night, did she once admit, nor even imply, that the "Blue Water" had been stolen.

His scrupulous care to avoid questioning her on the subject of the whereabouts of the sapphire and of her nephew, Michael Geste, made this easy for her, and she had availed herself of it to the full. The slightly painful realization that she now knew all that he did whereas he knew nothing from her, could not be denied.

As and again it entered his mind and roused the question—was it not she who confided in me, and at least say whether the sapphire has been stolen or not?

Again and again he silenced it with the loyal reply: "For excellent reasons. Whatever she does is right!"

After breakfast next day, Lady Brandon took him for a long drive. That the subject which now obsessed him (as it had in a different way, and for a different reason, obsessed de Beaujolais) was also occupying her mind, was demonstrated by the fact that, from time to time, and apropos of nothing in particular, she would suddenly ask him some fresh question on the secret of the tragedy of Zinderneuf.

How he restrained himself from saying, "Where is Michael? Has anything happened?" "Is the 'Blue Water' stolen?" He did not know. A hundred times, one or the other of these questions had leapt from his brain to the tip of his tongue, since the moment when, at their first interview, he had seen that she wished to make no communication or statement whatever.

As the carriage turned in to the park gates on their return, he alighted his hand on hers and said:

"My dear, I think everything has now been said, except one thing—your instructions to me. All I want to know is what you want me to do."

"I will tell you that, George, when you go. And thank you, my dear," replied Lady Brandon.

So he possessed his soul in patience until the hour struck.

"Come and rest on this chest a moment, Patricia," he said, on taking his departure next day, when she had telephoned to the garage, "to give me my orders. You are going to make me happier than I have been since you told me that you liked me too much to do me."

Lady Brandon seated herself beside Lawrence and all but loved him for his chivalrous devotion, his unselfishness, his gentle strength and utter trustworthiness.

"We have sat here before, George," she said, smiling, and as he took her hand.

"Listen, my dear. This is what I want you to do for me. Just nothing at all. The 'Blue Water' is not at Zinderneuf, nor anywhere else in Africa."

MOTURING BAD FOR DOGS

No matter how much your dog likes motoring, if you think anything of him, keep him at home.

Motoring is not good for him, says Dr. William J. Lentz, professor of veterinary anatomy of the University of Pennsylvania veterinary school. Riding the running board is especially bad.

Joy riding for dogs, Dr. Lentz says, causes conjunctivitis or what is known as inflammation of the mucous membrane of the eye socket. Rhinitis is another result of joy riding for dogs. That's inflammation of the membranes of the nose.

If the dog's eyes water easily, you may know he has the first ailment. If he sneezes easily he has the second.

Where Michael Geste is I do not know. What this paper means, I cannot tell. And thank you so much for wanting to help me, and for asking no questions. And now, goodbye, my dear, dear friend."

"Goodbye, my dearest dear," said George Lawrence, most sorely puzzled, and went out to the car a sadder but not a wiser man.

As the car drove away, Lady Brandon stood in deep thought, pinching her lip.

"To think of that now!" she said. "Be sure your sins." The world is a very small place," and went in search of the Reverend Maurice Ffolliott.

In regard to this one gentleman, George Lawrence entertained feelings which were undeniably mixed.

As a just and honest man, he recognized that the Reverend Maurice Ffolliott was a gentle soul, sweet natured, lovable creature, a finished scholar, a polished and cultured gentleman who had never intentionally harmed a living creature.

Ab the jealous, lifelong admirer and devotee of Lady Brandon, the rejected but undiminished lover, he knew that he hated not so much Ffolliott himself, as the fact of his existence.

Irrationally, George Lawrence felt that Lady Brandon would long outlive that notorious evil liver, her husband. But for Ffolliott, he believed, his unswerving faithful devotion would then get its reward. Not wholly selfishly, he considered that a truer helpmeet, a sturdier prop, a stouter shield and bulwark for this lady of many responsibilities, would be the world-wise and experienced George Lawrence, rather than this poor frail recluse of a chaplain.

Concerning the man's history, all he knew was that he had been the curate, well born but penniless, to whom Lady Brandon's father had presented the living which was in his gift. With the beautiful Patricia Rivers, Ffolliott had fallen disastrously and hopelessly in love.

Towards the young man, Patricia Rivers had entertained a sentiment of affection, compounded more of pity than of love.

Under parental pressure, assisted by training and comparative poverty, ambition had triumphed over affection, and after some refusals, the girl had married wealthy Sir Hector Brandon.

Later, and too late, she had realized the abyssal gulf that must lie between life with a selfish, heartless, gross rose, and that with such a man as the companion of her youth, with whom she had worked and played and chosen cleverness, learning, sweet nature, and noble usefulness she now realized.

Lawrence was aware that Lady Brandon fully believed that the almost fatal nervous breakdown which utterly changed Ffolliott in body and mind was the direct result of her worldly and loveless marriage with a man and vicious man. In this belief she had swooned down upon the poor lodgings where Ffolliott had lay at death's door, wrecked in body and mind with her to Brandon Abbas as soon as he could be moved. From there he had never gone—not for a single day, nor a single hour.

When he recovered, he was installed as chaplain, and as "the chaplain" he had been known ever since. Almost reluctantly, George Lawrence admitted that most of what was good, simple, kind, and happy in that house emanated from this gentle presence.

Pacing the little platform of the wayside station, it occurred to George Lawrence to wonder if he might have more to tell the puzzled de Beaujolais had his visit to Brandon Abbas included the privilege, if not the pleasure, of a conversation with the Reverend Maurice Ffolliott.

THE BACKACHES OF WOMEN CAUSE GREAT SUFFERING

Women are the greatest sufferers from backache, lame and aching backs, owing to the continual stooping, bending and lifting so necessary to perfect housework duties, and these backaches are caused, without a doubt, by some derangement of the muscles, for if there were not some weakness there the back would be strong and well.

Will give positive relief and comfort to all weak, backaching, suffering women, and make their household duties a pleasure instead of a burden. Don't say the original "Kidney Pills" having been on the market for the past 40 years.

This is why the New '70' Out-performs any Car of Its Size, Type and Class

Combining the world renowned advantages of the Knight sleeve-valve motor (smoothness, long life, simplicity, economy) with revolutionary achievements in six cylinder engineering, has resulted in the new '70', a car that in speed, power and pick-up out-performs any car of its size and type and class.

It has the only type of engine that actually improves with use. No carbon to remove, no valves to grind. Better and smoother at 50,000 miles than at the beginning.

Drive it at 2 to 65 miles or faster; the engine quietly purrs on not a tremor of vibration. At all speeds there is a complete absence of all road shocks. As a result of its advanced engineering there is absolutely no wandering, no shimmying, no wheel-jitter.

The beauty and smartness of the new '70' is distinctly refreshing. Four wheel brakes and other details of advanced engineering are, of course, standard equipment.

Come and see the '70'—compare it in every way you know. Its remarkably low price, plus its many distinctive advantages place the '70' Willys-Knight Six in the front rank as an outstanding value in the moderate priced six-cylinder field.

LITERARY NOTES

A new book of more than passing interest is included in Nelson's autumn list: "Homilies and Recollections" by John Buchan. The book is a volume of essays covering a wide range of subjects and includes "Great Captains," that very comprehensive address which Mr. Buchan delivered to several large audiences during his last visit to Canada.

Sir Henry Newbolt's name is also included in the same list—this time, not as an editor of text-books, but as the author of a very entertaining volume of literary essays entitled "Studies in Green and Grey."

Laura G. Salverson, author of "The Viking Heart," and "When Sparrows Fall" has just completed a historical novel, which will shortly appear under the title of "Lord of the Silver Dragon." Robert Hood has written a new work of fiction entitled "Grain" and J. H. McCulloch in "The Men of Kildonan" has written a story of the founding of the Red River settlement.

These three books by western writers will be published by McClelland and Stewart.

Martha Ostenso, whose first book, "Wild Geese," created so much comment, has written another story of prairie life, "The Dark Dawn." Harriet Murker, a woman of indomitable will and ruthless ambition, marries Lucien Dorrit, a farmer's boy, whose days have been crowded with dreams and the contemplation of youthful ideals. The pathos, the humor, the romance, the tragedy that fill the years of their married life are all unknown to those who move about them in the rural district of Loyola. The same authentic sense of situation and the same grace of style that combined to bring the author of "Wild Geese" into the first rank of contemporary writers, will give fresh enthusiasm among Miss Ostenso's many admirers.

Captain Evans, who commanded the destroyer "Broke" in one of the most stirring actions of the war, has turned to authorship, and has written several successful stories for boys. He has lately collaborated with Dr. Draycott Dell in a novel of adventure entitled "The Treasure Trail."

"The Pictorial Life of Wolfe" is a book of two hundred pages and fully half that number of illustrations. It is written by Mrs. A. E. Wolfe-Aylwood, who occupies the house in West Hill, Kent, which was James Wolfe's early home. The first edition of this interesting work is of a special character, being limited to the number of those who were original subscribers. This will be succeeded by an edition which will be sold at a price within the reach of all. Next year the bi-centenary of Wolfe's birth will be celebrated in England with special ceremonies, and the appearance of this attractive book is therefore most timely.

A VALUABLE POSSESSION

A quick sense of humor is surely one of the happiest of mortal possessions. It saves a man from many a bitter fall consequent upon his taking himself too seriously. He who has learned to laugh at himself is a near neighbor to happiness, for reality never increases beyond the danger point in the truly humorous man. A kindly feeling for the ludicrous easily smooths away the sharp edges of disappointment and humiliation, and the wise man draws back from many an act, and many a speech with precision or even calculation dictated, but which humor instantly represents to him by an image as undignified and absurd. Humor, also, which is inseparable from tenderness, illuminates for us the cranks and eccentricities of our neighbors, so that we are attracted by them, rather than repelled. It is the source of that joyous spirit of tolerance which is a necessary condition of happy living. Through it we learn to find our delight in the mere sound and spectacle of life.

GRAIN STOOKER PROVES SURPRISE

Several prominent business men and farmers journeyed out to Thomas Jackson's farm in Killarney, last week, to see the operation of an automatic grain stooker attached to a binder, and they were met with a great surprise. The machine took the sheaves from the binder and sent them into excellent shocks. Not only did the machine handle the binder could deliver it, but at the same time it delivered all loose grain into the shock, due to the fact that any grain coming off the deck of the binder had no alternative other than to follow the sheaves into the shock.

It was estimated by many that this grain saving feature alone would save from 50c to $1.50 an acre to the farmer, depending on the kind and condition of the grain.

This machine was invented by O. F. Hammill, of Calgary, and is known as the Hammill stooker. The machine has covered from 60 to 65 acres of wheat, rye and oats in all various stages, consisting of green feed, rye and matured wheat and oats, with apparently the same results.—Calgary Herald.

SMILE AWHILE

The Right Doctor

He was dug out of the wreck of his automobile and carried into the nearest doctor's office. "I can't do anything for this man," said the doctor, "I'm a veterinary surgeon." "You are the right man for the job, Doc," said the motorist, weakly. "I was a jackass to think I could beat that train to the crossing."

Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. Years only wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul.

"Well, Algy, I hear you have taken up walking as the doctor ordered. How does it go?" "Seems a bit awkward at first without a windshield."

"At last, my angel," said the happy man after he had settled with the minister. "We are really and truly one."

"Theoretically, yes," rejoined the modern bride, "but from a practical standpoint it will be advisable to order dinner for two."

"Taps," said the small son, "what do they mean by college-bred? Is it different from any other kind of bread?" "My son," replied the father. "It is a four-years' loaf."

"Is Mrs. De Mair an active member of your sewing circle?" "Oly goodness, no. She never has a word to say—just sits there and sews all the time."

Here and There

Victoria—Twenty head of grade Oxford ewes, two years old, from Mayne Island, have been sold to Japanese buyers. This makes a new departure in the sheep industry of the island, being the first of the home production to be sent to Japan.

It is estimated that southern British Columbia will produce 3,217,000 boxes of apples this season. This is about 700,000 boxes more than last year's production. Arrangements are being made for a heavy export business to Great Britain, as well as to the Prairies and Eastern Canada.

A regular aerial mail service has been established between Osaka in Japan and Darien in South Manchuria, two Japanese built "Kawanishi" planes being used. This service is daily, and is being sponsored by the "Osaka Mainichi" one of the largest newspapers in Japan whose aviators recently flew to Berlin.

Moscow—One thousand head of Western Canadian light horses purchased for the Soviet government were assembled here. The horses, which are all light, are being bought for the Russian government by Russian funds placed in Canadian banks for that purpose. A similar purchase was made last year and the repeating of the order indicates satisfaction with the Canadian stock.

The increase in the net profits of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the first eight months of the year ending August 31st is $6,814,895.76, according to a financial statement issued at the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific at Montreal. This is the increase in profits as compared with the profits for the same period in 1925. The increase in the gross earnings over the same period in 1925 is stated at $12,691,364.57.

"Hell-Roaring Canyon," the scene of a dramatic incident in John Murray Gibson's new novel "Eyes of a Gypsy" is the actual name of a remote valley in the Canadian Pacific Rockies as known to the guides and hunters, although the Geographic Board of the Canadian Government has just changed it to a less romantic name—"Nunna Creek." The reason for the change in name is that there is another Hell Roaring Canyon in the Rockies which claims a prior right to the name.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, one of the oldest military organizations in the United States, being founded as an offshoot of the famous Artillery Company of London, in 1630, held their 289th annual field day and march past at Montreal, arriving at the Canadian Pacific Place Viger Station on October 2nd. About 250 members of this organization, representing the oldest families in the State of Massachusetts, took part in this event.

"Dean Inge has a very imperfect appreciation of the feeling of India towards England, when he prophesies that India's attitude to the Mother Country in the event of a future crisis, is doubtful," declared Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraj-havacharya, Indian potentate who called for England on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France recently after a lengthy tour of the Dominion. The Diwan discounted the gloomy prophecies contained in Dean Inge's new book entitled "England."

For the third consecutive year the first aid team of the Canadian Pacific Police Constabulary at the Windsor Street Station, Montreal, carried off the "Gates Cup" symbolic of the highest marks obtained in the Quebec District C.P.R. first aid competition. The examinations were conducted at the Place Viger Hotel in Montreal, September 29th, by Dr. Beatty, chief surgeon of the Canadian Pacific. Four other teams were in the field including two from the Angus Shops in Montreal, and one from Ottawa and Quebec.

POTTED PLANTS AND FUNERAL DESIGNS PROMPT SERVICE

FORCING BULBS

The forcing of bulbs in the house in winter is so easy that more people should experience the delight of having hyacinths, tulips, daffodils and others bloom at that time. The bulbs should be planted as soon as they can be procured in the autumn, as unless a good root system is made before one tries to force most of the bulbs, the bloom will not be satisfactory. If good loamy soil cannot be had, quite satisfactory results may be had from coarse sand. A soil that does not bake is desirable. For hyacinths, tulips and daffodils, pans or five or six inch pots are most satisfactory. Three tulip and daffodil bulbs do well in a five or six inch pot, and one or more hyacinth bulbs per pot are used, depending on the size of the pot. When planted in pans six or more tulip bulbs are used. Provide drainage for pot by putting piece or pieces of broken pot, coal cinders, or charcoal in the bottom. Fill the pot with soil and shake it down by knocking the pot against something. Do not press down the soil to accomplish this, as it will be too firm and the bulbs will lift out when it begins to root. After turning the soil, place the bulb on the surface and press down until the upper side of the bulb is level with the surface, then make soil firm around the bulb with the fingers to prevent it lifting. After planting, there should be not less than three-quarters of an inch space between the surface of the soil and the top of the pot, as, if there is less, it will be difficult to give enough water. The pots should now be put in a cool part of the cellar but where the soil will not be frozen. Water thoroughly and see that the soil is kept moist until the bulbs are well rooted, which will be in six weeks or more, and until they are forced. If the soil becomes dry the roots will be injured and they will not force well. Frezias and Crocuses. Sacred Lily do not require to be well rooted before forcing. One should not try to force tulips before January even if they show growth above the soil, as even if well rooted, they will not force satisfactorily before this.

Some good, inexpensive varieties for forcing are

Hyacinths—Roman, Gigantea, Norma, La Grandesse, Eucharist, General Pellissier, King of the Blues.

Narcissus—Paper White, Princess, Golden Spar, Emperor, Sir Watkins, Lacer, King Alfred, Madame de Graft, Madame Plomp.

Tulips—(Early Single) Gold Finch, Koizerskron, Lady Borel, Proserpine, Maes, Sir. Thos. Lipton, Prince of Austria, Duchesse de Parma.

(Early Double) Muriel, Couronne d'or, Imperator Rubrum.

(Darwin Tulips) Bartigon, Clara Butt, Farcombe Sanders, Wm. Pitt.
